FITTING GUIDE

KEEPER LOOPS FOR WATCH STRAPS, SET OF 2

Two silicone loops that replace the lost, split or stretched keeper of a silicone smartwatch strap. Six widths, from 16 to 26 mm. Choosing the size, fitting in a minute, care.

REF. BOUCLEMONTREBLCK16MM · WIDTHS 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26 MM · SILICONE, SET OF 2

Before you start

The loop size is the width of the strap, not of the watch: read it on the back of the strap, where it is often engraved, or measure the strap where the keeper sits. Between two sizes, take the smaller: silicone stretches a little and a loop that is too wide slides.

Fitting the loop

1. Unbuckle the watch and free the long end, the one with the holes.
2. Remove the old keeper if one is left: slide it off the end of the strap. A split keeper is cut off with scissors, without touching the strap.
3. Slide the new loop on from the end of the strap, small inner nub facing the inside of the strap: it seats in a hole and stops the loop sliding.
4. Position it against the fixed keeper, where the old one was, or a little further along if you want more of the end held down.
5. Buckle up and tuck the end of the strap under both keepers. It should lie flat, without gaping.

Care

- Rinse in clean water after sweat, sea or pool; dry before putting the watch back on.
- No solvent or alcohol. A keeper that turns pale or stiff has aged: replace it, that is what the second loop in the set is for.

CHOOSING THE WIDTH

- Measure the strap, not the watch: a 22 mm watch strap can be narrower where the keeper sits.
- The available widths match the common straps of sports GPS watches, from small cases to large outdoor watches.
- Fit both loops if the strap has no keeper left at all: the end will then be held at two points.

GOOD TO KNOW

- A loop that is too wide turns and holds nothing; too narrow, it tears as it goes on. Do not force it, change size.
- Inner nub bothering you? Turn the loop so it drops into a hole in the strap, and you will not feel it.
- The loops replace neither the pin nor the buckle: they only hold the end of the strap.
